

What's Eating Your Collection?

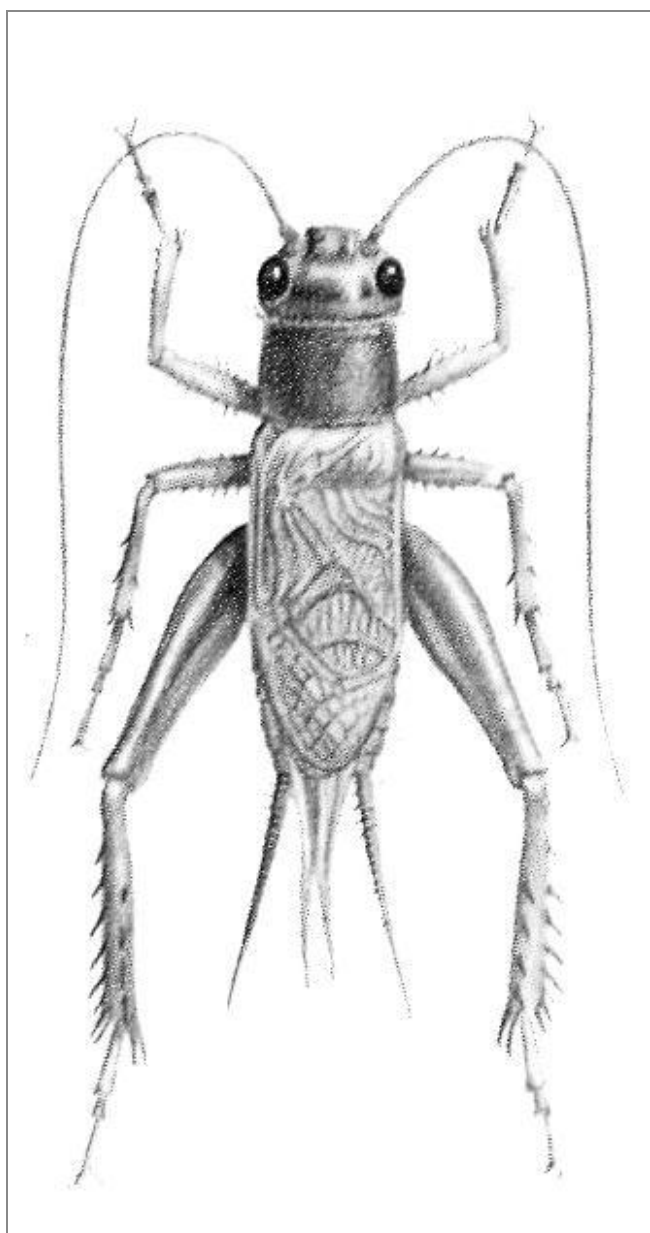

House cricket Acheta

Adult.

There are many species, all have large rear legs and long, thin antennae. The common house cricket is found in heating ducts but is now quite scarce in houses. It can sometimes be found in museums which use them to feed live reptiles.

Size: There are many species 10-40mm

These are not museum pests, but dead bodies will provide food for Anthrenus.

Related Objects

Field Cricket